

Paul Armstrong is a Distinguished University Professor, University of Alberta and Director, Canadian VIGOUR Centre (Virtual Coordinating Centre for Global Collaborative Cardiovascular Research). He serves in a broad range of consultative editorial and research review roles and has received numerous awards for scholarly contributions. He has published extensively, frequently lectures in academic forums nationally and internationally, and plays a leadership role in a number of ongoing cardiovascular clinical trials. Dr. Armstrong has had a lifelong commitment to the education and training of healthcare professionals. His is recognized both nationally and internationally for mentoring trainees and faculty which has been a key signature of his career. He is an attending cardiologist at the University Hospital, with particular interest and expertise in acute coronary care and heart failure.