08:00-17:10 MAJOR FORUM PROGRAM

SOLUTIONS TO INEQUITIES IN INDIGENOUS HEALTH: WHAT WORKS AND WHY?

Objectives:

- To improve understanding of the landscape and present current science
- To explore meaningful solutions and innovative strategies
- To develop the foundation for a CAHS major assessment

The health of Indigenous peoples' has been stigmatized by negative stereotypes in media, news and research reports which bias our understanding and can be more damaging than helpful. Balancing the negative with positive stories can guide us towards a better future. This year's Forum will look beyond the dysfunction of the past, towards solutions that have had success addressing inequities that exist in Indigenous health. Our goal is to identify key issues facing Canadians and researchers across in the country today and to illustrate how we can begin to move the conversation and research agenda away from a problem-based discourse towards solution-oriented research. Fellows will walk away from this event with an increased awareness of the promising practices that are making a difference in these communities. This is not a profiling of every promising practice and good intervention available today but rather a sampling of projects ranging from HIV to genetics, to medical, health services and policy research. It is a renewed way of seeing Indigenous peoples' potential for improved health and wellbeing presented through the political lens of the federal government; the work of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission and through the innovative research of scientists working with these communities today and into the future. Fellows will reflect on how their research might contribute to improving the health and wellbeing of Indigenous peoples' particularly future generations of Indigenous children and youth.

Thank you for participating in the 2016 CAHS Forum.

Sincerely,

Jeffrey Reading, First Nations Health Authority Chair in Heart Health & Wellness, Simon Fraser University and former Director, Institute for Indigenous Health, Dalla Lana School of Public Health, University of Toronto; and

John O'Neil, Dean of Health Sciences, Simon Fraser University and former Director, Manitoba First Nations Centre for Aboriginal Health Research

INTERFACES BETWEEN SCIENCE AND POLICY

JEAN ROCHON

Jean Rochon has a triple career as an academic, a specialist in public health and a politician. He holds a Bachelor of laws from Université de Montréal, a doctorate in medicine from Université Laval and a doctorate in public health from Harvard University. He was awarded an honorary doctorate by Université catholique de Louvain.

He assumed the duties of director of the Department of social and preventive medicine (1970-1979) and dean of the Faculty of medicine (1979-1985) at Université Laval. He left this position to chair the Commission of inquiry on health and social services formed by the Government of Quebec. After the presentation of the report in early 1988, he joined the World Health Organization first as director of programs at the Regional Office for Europe and then as director of the Division of Health protection and promotion at the WHO headquarters in Geneva. Subsequently, he was a member of the Government of Quebec from 1994 to 2003 and successively assumed the positions of Minister of Health and Social Services, Minister of Research, Science and Technology, Minister of Employment and Social Solidarity and Minister of labour.

He has been awarded the R.D. Defries award by the Canadian Public Association (CPHA), the Distinction santé durable by the Association de santé publique du Québec (ASPQ), the Andreja Stampar medal by the Association of Schools of Public Health in the European Region (ASPHER) and the prize of the Association des administratrices et administrateurs de recherche universitaire du Québec (ADARUQ). He has been appointed as an officer of the Ordre national du Québec.

He is Professor Emeritus at Université Laval, adjunct professor at Université de Montréal and attached as a consultant to the Institut national de santé publique du Québec.
