08:00-17:00 MAJOR FORUM PROGRAM

Beyond the morass: A national strategy for chronic pain in Canada

Chronic pain is a major source of disability and suffering in Canadian children, adults and seniors. Chronic pain occurs in many different diseases and is itself a disease. The understanding, management and prevention of chronic pain is complicated and confusing. It has been plagued by: 1. severe inadequacies and under-investment in our knowledge base in both basic and applied science; 2. a failure of our health system to provide appropriate and timely care in both primary and specialist care; 3. stigmatization and blaming of chronic pain patients and; 4. most recently, by being derailed by the opioid crisis.

At the same time, Canada has some of the most creative pain scientists in basic sciences and social and clinical sciences, outstanding chronic pain patient activism and caring, dedicated and thoughtful pain clinicians. A science-driven consensus is beginning to form about the changes needed to overcome the inadequacies of our approach to chronic pain.

The CAHS forum will present a bold challenge to Canada. It will discuss a national strategy that would usher in a new era of chronic pain prevention, primary care and specialist treatment and prevention in Canada. Patients, clinicians, scientists and innovators will present on drug discovery, new goals in psychosocial pain interventions, new ways to involve patients and better methods to deliver care.

Sincerely,
